Lemon Grove City Council breezes through short meeting

The Lemon Grove City Council held a very brief meeting Tuesday night, December 4, during which the following business was accomplished:

The Council accepted the Lemon Grove Senior Center as substantially complete; authorized the demolition of a single-family structure located at the corner of Olive and Church Streets; and adopted an ordinance amending Lemon Grove Municipal code relating to regulated businesses as opposed to those businesses which merely require a business license. The amendment also repeals the sections relating to firearm sales, junk wrecking and storage yards, outdoor assemblages, second-hand dealers, solicitors and charitable solicitation, swap meets and swap lots, taxicabs and teenage dances.

Lemon Grove's Mildred Stevens celebrates her 100th birthday

A resident of the Cresta Loma Convalescent and Guest Home in Lemon Grove celebrated her 100th birthday last week.

Mildred Stevens, the spunky centenarian, enjoyed a birthday celebration in the company of her daughter, Cleo Blaylock, her son, Dan Stevens, and the staff and residents of the convalescent home.

She was crowned "Queen for a Day" with a paper crown covered with hearts and serenaded by Phillip Jordan, the owner of the home. The party also included cake and ice cream, a favorite of Stevens', who is fond of sweets.

Stevens, a former resident of Chula Vista, used to work in the lemon packing house there. "I sorted the lemons after they were washed," said Stevens who hasn't let being 100 slow her down.

One of the staff members said they use Stevens as an example for other residents because she still pushes the wheels on her own wheel chair.

Her son, trying to put her age into perspective said, "You know, she was born 17 years after the Civil War."

But Stevens isn't interested in that sort of thing. When anyone mentioned her age she just laughed and said, "I can't believe it."

'Living Tree' show sold out

People hoping to catch a performance of the ever popular "Living Christmas Tree" presented by the Skyline Wesleyan Church are going to be sorry they didn't buy their tickets sooner because the show is completely sold out.

The show, featuring close to 350 performers who sing, dance and generally rev-up everyone's Christmas spirit, is sold out for each of its 27 performances, including a special benefit performance on behalf of the Child Abuse Foundation.

Skyline set a goal to raise $100,000 for the foundation and, thanks to the shows overwhelming popularity, it has already exceeded this year's goal and is rapidly approaching the $200,000 mark.

If you want to see next year's performance, be sure and buy your tickets early. You won't want to miss this Christmas extravaganza again.

Pastor at Skyline Wesleyan seeks to bring about reform in Romania

Freedom of religion is one of the rights most Americans take for granted, but in Romania it's something to be fought for, and a local pastor is helping in that fight.

Tim Elmore, an associate pastor at Skyline Wesleyan Church, has led two youth crusades to Romania and hopes to lead a third. He and three other men traveled to Romania in the Spring of 1988 and 1989 to "stir up faith in Christ" with music and prayers.

One of the first things Elmore and his companions noticed was different in Romania was that they were constantly being watched, almost from the moment they crossed the border.

"We were waiting for a taxi to take us to our hotel and no one would pick us up," remembers Elmore. "Eventually one taxi did, but every time we drove by a police officer, he would flash his lights. By the time we arrived at our hotel, everyone knew our names and our room had been bugged."

The group had to be very careful about what they said both politically and religiously, said

Elmore. "It was very difficult for Americans to get used to at first," he added.

The Romanian people are also very different from Americans. "They are very repressed economically and emotionally," said Elmore. "I had to work to make them smile. They express their joy through tears after years of being beaten down," he said.

"There is no reform in Romania at all. The people feel ruled by a paranoid tyrant," he said, but the oppression of this tyrant government seems to be working in God's favor, said Elmore. "The control on religion is so tight, it's having the opposite effect. It's causing a great awakening and spiritual revival. People are beginning to see the emptiness of communist rule," he added. To be a Christian in Romania is not a simple decision, but an actual threat to one's life and livelihood, said Elmore.

The secret police attended each of Elmore's sermons and wrote down the names of the people who became Christians that night. "Those people could lose their chance at going to college or getting good jobs," said Elmore, "it's a real commitment."

The men who have decided to be ministers are also in danger. Many times the secret police will threaten their family and sometimes the government tries to shut down a church by killing the pastor.

Elmore said there are about one thousand churches in Romania, but only 80 pastors. The pastors are forced to become circuit riders and in many cases, the people are so dedicated they meet in churches without a pastor and just read the bible, said Elmore. This dedication was also demonstrated to Elmore and his companions by the large crowd the services would draw. He said every pew was packed with people, plus people stood three rows deep in aisles and balconies. The doors and windows were even open so people could look in.

Through his trips to Romania Elmore says he hopes to train future leaders and "just encourage the people to hang in there."

Saga of the Iron Horsemen: a Sports Story

Al Couppee (Koopay), retired TV Ch 10 sports director and San Diego's favorite sportscaster, has extended his sports lore into a book.

He tells the story of many wondrous sports events in which he was a part, but the keystone is the magic years he was a member of the University of Iowa Hawkeye's football seasons.

Couppee was the Hawkeye quarterback in 1939, '40 and '41, but 1939 was the year he spotlights.

His book carries a triple title, all of them fitting: "One Magic Year," "1939" and "An Iron Man Remembers."

In 1939 the Hawkeyes earned the title of "Ironmen." In that year the team's record was 6-1-1 (Lost to Michigan; tied Northwestern) made all the more remarkable because it followed a 1-6-1 record the year before.

The 1939 record was made by most of the regular team playing 55-60 minutes in at least one game. Those who didn't were out with injuries.

At the time colleges were scheduling eight games a season. In the preceding years, U of Iowa had never won a Big 10 game. In 1939 they won 4.

Couppee, always the consummate story teller, takes sports fans along an informative and interesting trail of college football's contribution to young athletes who had the pride to rise from obscurity.

The shadow of the '39 depression hung over the midwest. Finding jobs to keep athletes in school was difficult. It changed the lives of some three dozen young men who made up the "Ironmen." Their accomplishment was outstanding all the more because it represented all that is good in college athletics.

Readers will find "1939" hard to put down. While it is mostly biographical, Couppee seldom mentions himself as he tells much of the "glory years" in conversational style.

Couppee says, "It is a story that needed to be told and I was fortunate enough to be able to gather the material to tell it because I lived it."

Couppee's college career was interrupted in 1942 when the navy called. After four years of distinguished service, he returned to Iowa State to complete his BS degree in commerce.

He played football with the Washington Redskins for three seasons before embarking on a successful career in radio and television.

In San Diego he attracted sportsmen and sports viewers alike with his uncluttered, accurate programs. He made sports events understandable. He gave credence to those persons and events that earned it. In all, he left listeners with an up-feeling.

His book, "1939" is available only through the official Iowa Hawks Shop, Department of Athletics, U of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa, 52242. The book sells for about $10. Couppee has requested that all profits be directed to the University of Iowa Letterman's Club to establish a permanent post-graduate scholarship for worthy student-athletes in memory of the Iowa Ironmen of 1939.

Al Couppee, who now lives near Lake Elsinore, said he will autograph his book. On receipt of the book from the Hawks Shop, purchaser may contact Max Goodwin, 469-0101 and he will arrange to get the autographing done.

The Brush Fires of 1970

The recent brush fires north of the city of San Diego reopens a grim reminder of our great loss from the 1970 fire in the Alpine area.

All that year on weekends my wife, Willie, and I hung wallpaper in Borrego Springs at one of the finest country club motels. We didn't bill the owners for our summer-long services intentionally until September as that money was for our long awaited trip to Europe.

We flew out of San Diego at 8:00 p.m. on September 17th and landed in London 13 hours later. During our most wonderful vacation of sight-seeing the British Isles and a few of the western European countries we read in their local newspapers about the recent brush fires in Southern California.

The news of the fires didn't arouse us as brush fires were common at that time of the year. When we returned to San Diego on October 15th our friends that met our plane informed us that our most beautiful, nearly new home up in the hills southeast of Alpine had burned to the ground.

The news was devastating for we had just finished our "Castle in the Hills" and now it was gone. In 1968 we purchased 11 secluded acres with 2 seasonal streams, a good dug well in solid granite, majestic old oak trees, and a panoramic view that wouldn't quit.

Armed with a blueprint from the architect we proceeded to build our own home that required lots of "Sweat and Tears".

We were told the people that "Baby Sat" the house for us had been warned by the Forest Rangers earlier in the day, "Pack up and get out quick." After they packed up and were ready to leave the Ranger returned and said, "All clear! The wind has changed direction so you are safe right here."

That was the wrong advice for the wind changed again because now the tenants just barely made it out with just the clothes on their backs. In just a few minutes the house was completely gone, like it had exploded.

We went right up there to see what was left of our year's labor. It was just like walking on the moon or the "Twilight Zone." The ground was like powder and the trees were burned but still standing. The trees and brush would crumble at a touch like they were frozen. The area was scattered with our wild animal friends but now all were seared to a crisp.

The fire must have been so intense that most all the building materials were disintegrated into fine ash. I had learned the intensity of brush fires that are fanned by strong winds the year before when the fire jumped the road near our place. The heat was just like a blow torch and could make almost anything explode.

Thank God for the insurance company paying for most of the financial loss from that inconceivable disaster. All that was left for us were fond memories of the "Labor of Love" that went into the creation of such a magnificent home.

Fire safety tips offered for holidays

This is the time of year when homes are filled with holiday spirit, decorations and seasonal trimmings.

Area fire departments would like to offer some safety tips to help you make your holidays a fire safe season.

• Before placing a tree inside the home, make a fresh cut at the base of the tree and place in a water holding stand. Keep your tree away from heat sources such as wall heaters and floor furnaces.

• Use only approved decorative light strings in good condition. Avoid the use of household extension cords.

• Never place candles or any burning objects on or near the tree.

• Wrapped packages or paper decorations should not touch any light bulbs on the tree.

• Remove the tree from your home shortly after Christmas before the branches become dry and brittle.

Wishing all of you a fire safe Holiday!!!

Owners Plight = Players Delight

Oh, to be young again and have physical talent enough to be enjoying a successful career as a professional athlete. You can't dream the wild levels reality is reaching.

Owners have gone mad, forcing huge amounts of legal tender in guaranteed contracts on marginal players. Mark Langston signs for $16 million over 5 years to set a record for baseball salaries. He doesn't expect the record to hold.

Gene Autry had to dip deep into the Anaheim Angels vault to out bid at least three other clubs—the New York Yankees, Los Angeles Dodgers and our own San Diego Padres— to secure Langston's services.

The money is astounding, but you had to figure Langston would draw top bidding in the free agent derby. After all, he's a bona fide "super star," fires from the highly desirable left side and has already served a term in player's poverty row under penny pinching Seattle Mariners owner George Argyros.

Langston earned his way to baseball riches, but come on, $16 million over 5 years? The President doesn't even dream about such high finance.

You gotta figure the Autry give away had something to do with Padre owner Joan Kroc upping the offer to former Padre, now free agent, save-king Mark Davis.

Kroc's "final" offer is $12 million over 4 years and his signing could be an accomplished fact between the writing and the reading of this tale.

Just because I like to play with the numbers, that offer comes to $75,000 a week for the nine months of the baseball season.

Still, Davis is a blue chipper and is probably worth the money considering the current market.

What really astounds the sensibilities are contracts going to such journeyman players as outfielder/first baseman Carmelo Martinez and pitcher Pascual Perez.

Martinez, a career .250 hitter signed a two year pack for $1.75 million with Philadelphia. That is ridiculous. But even more absurd is the $5.9 million Yankee owner George Steinbrenner is giving Perez on a 3 year deal.

What on earth is the business of baseball coming to? Kroc's legal beagles and bean counters didn't make any meaningful offers until Autry ran the market off the scale.

The only positive move coming out of the Padre's front office mismash is the return of Jack McKeon to the trading table.

Trader Jack's first move was to contact American League MVP Robin Yount. Despite earlier front office denials, the Padres are interested in Yount. McKeon would love to add Yount's .318 average, 21 home run, 103 RBI to his line up card.

It seems that when McKeon takes the reins, good things happen and when the bean counters and legal beagles have the floor, nothing happens. Nothing good, anyhow.

With luck, the Padres will field a pair of $3 million men in the 1990 chase. And you'd better figure the future holds more brothers to the lodge chartered by Davis and Yount.

In a sign of things to come, pay heed to the NBA where the average salary next year will be $1 million. Where will this end?

Hunter calls for aid renewal

Rep. Duncan Hunter called for the resumption of military aid to the freedom fighters in Nicaragua following the announcement that Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega is ending the 19 month truce between the Sandinistas and the Contra forces.

"Clearly the Sandinistas have never lived up to the various Central American peace agreements," said Hunter, the Chairman of the Republican Research Committee, the fifth-ranking Republican leadership post in the House. "I call upon President Bush and the leadership in Congress to resume military aid to the freedom fighters in Nicaragua. If we ever want to see freedom in Nicaragua, we must resume military aid. Ortega is nothing more than a dictator who resorts to lies, deception and intimidation to solidify the power of his regime in Nicaragua."

"During the truce, the Marxist Sandinistas have continued to tighten their stranglehold on Central America while, at the same time, they've lobbied liberals in the United States to cut off meaningful aid to their only opposition in Nicaragua, the Contras. During the cease-fire, the Sandinistas have continued to assassinate their opponents and to supply other Marxist terrorist groups in El Salvador and other Central American countries. We must renew military aid to the Nicaraguan freedom fighters so that true democracy has a chance to return to Nicaragua."

The Washington Post reported on October 20, 1989, that a record shipment of weapons and explosives was intercepted in El Espino, Honduras, en route from the Sandinistas to the Marxist FMLN guerillas in El Salvador. The shipment included hundreds of rocket launchers, mortars, assault rifles and urban guerilla training manuals with "FMLN" stamped on them. This seizure came on the same day that the Salvadoran government was concluding three days of peace negotiations with the FMLN. A similar shipment was captured in El Salvador in May, 1989.

An April 1989 report by "Americas Watch," a human rights group, detailed a pattern of 40 summary executions of Contra collaborators by Sandinista forces. The report states that when Contra forces had pulled out of certain areas of Nicaragua, Sandinista forces moved in to kill suspected Contra supporters.

Lemon Grove resident meets with top Costa Rican officials

Lemon Grove resident Peter Casey, special assistant to National University's president, recently returned from Costa Rica where he met with high-level government officials and businessmen and attended graduation ceremonies at NU's Costa Rica campus. Accompanying Casey were NU president Dr. Jerry C. Lee and National University board of trustees member Lucia De Garcia.

During the graduation, Lee presented the commencement address. Dr. Eduardo Lizano, president of the state-run Central Bank, also addressed the students on the international economic position of Costa Rica.

Lizano received an honorary doctorate of humane letters for his efforts on behalf of the country. In addition, Lee gave special recognition to Dr. Uladislao Gamez, the former president of Costa Rica.

While in Costa Rica, Casey and his companions were invited to the home of Costa Rican President Oscar Arias and his wife, Margarita de Arias Sanchez, for an informal visit.

He related, "We discussed the future and the role of National University. President Arias thanked us for what we've done for Costa Rica with our programs."

De Garcia added, "He seemed proud to say that his sister and two brothers-in-law were graduates of NU, and that he held an honorary doctorate from there."

De Garcia had a special meeting with the first lady to discuss issues of importance to women. "I was pleased to discover that 51 percent of women in that country are educated," De Garcia remarked. "They now know that they have the opportunity to receive an education; they take advantage of that opportunity."

The three representatives from NU also paid a visit to Dr. Francisco Pacheco, the Costa Rican minister of education. The four discussed public education in that country, as well as how NU's education relates to the business development of Costa Rica.

Casey said, "Realizing that technology can help their country develop its economy, they are concentrating on teaching computer literacy. Consequently, a lot of our talk centered on using and teaching computers for education and business purposes."

De Garcia, Lee and Casey toured the facilities at NU's campus and met with the staff. Describing her trip, De Garcia said, "It confirmed my original goals of supporting NU in Latin America. In Costa Rica, NU is looked at as a center of international studies. If it is happening in Costa Rica, it should be happening elsewhere in the American hemisphere."

Charger Blood Drive tradition continues

The successful tradition of the San Diego Chargers' Annual Blood Drive with the San Diego Blood Bank has transcended a generation of players, coaches and team officials to mark 11 years as the largest single-location blood donor event in the United States.

'Blood Drive XI' will be held on Tuesday, December 12 at the Town and Country Convention Center, Mission Valley, San Diego, from 1 to 9 p.m. Current and former members of the team will be on hand during the event in addition to continuous entertainment provided by local entertainers and bands.

In addition to participating in a tradition, all donors at 'Blood Drive XI' will receive a commemorative sweatshirt compliments of the Fieldstone Company and Union Ban, free Chicago Brothers' Pizza, soft drinks compliments of Pepsi-Cola, Dreyer's Frozen Yogurt, and Service American Hot Dogs.

Also, part of the tradition is a fashion show modeled by the players and their wives at 8 p.m. in the entertainment room.

Blood donors at the Chargers'

Blood Drive are so numerous that participants must take a number when they arrive, and then are directed to the Atlas Ballroom of the Convention Center to enjoy entertainment and refreshments until called to give blood in another large ballroom.

It was Placekicker Rolf Benirschke, whose story inspired the Chargers' Blood Drive program in 1979. Thousands of fans turned out at the San Diego Stadium that year to give blood to the San Diego Blood Bank in Rolf's name to replace the large amount he used during intestinal surgery as a result of ulcerative colitis.

The enthusiastic response to that first event fostered the annual blood drive program with the San Diego Blood Bank as well as the San Diego Chargers' Blood Reserve Fund.

The team administers the reserve fund to any San Diego County resident who needs large amounts of blood and have no one to make replacement donations for them.

Today more than 10,000 donations have been made at Charger Blood Drives and literally hundreds of lives have been saved by this program.

Military Widows program planned

The Inland San Diego County Chapter, Society of Military Widows, will enjoy the Christmas music and a sing-a-long by Ms. Paula Palmer, on the piano. Ms. Laura Ramsey playing the flute, at the meeting on Saturday, December 9th, at the Hillside Recreation Center, 8400 Buena Terrace, El Cajon at 10:10 a.m. All Military Widows are invited to come and join in this fun time.

The Inland Chapter will also meet with the San Diego Founding Chapter for a Christmas Luncheon and party time on Sunday, December 10th, at the M.C.R.D. Officers Club.

For further information, call 443-8804 or 465-2104.

Ice Sculpting

ROP catering students demonstrate the art!

Steve Hamey of La Mesa tried to create a cedar tree reminiscent of his native land of Lebanon, but his piece met with disaster when the ice broke.

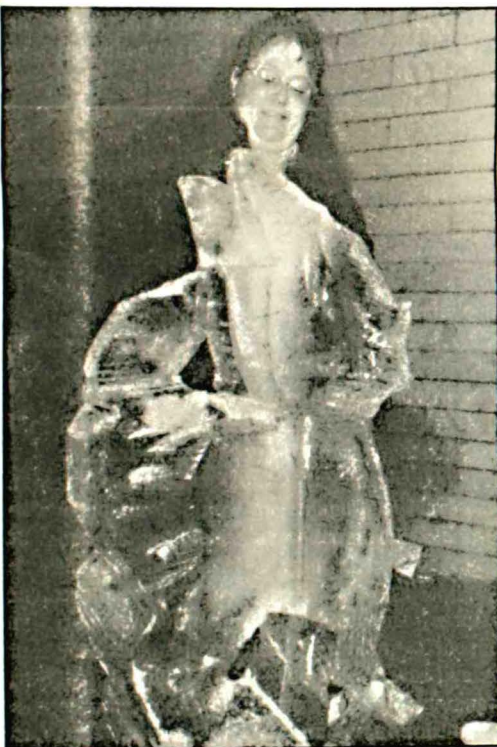

Making the best out of his remaining block of ice, Steve Hamey opted to sculpt a porpoise.

Dale Conger-Cross of Lemon Grove shown working on his replica of a Salvadorian wood-carving.

Aspiring students in Chef Paul Columbo's buffet catering class demonstrated the art of carving ice blocks into figurines at Grossmont College last Thursday night.

Students enrolled in Columbo's class are all part of the Regional Occupational Program (ROP). The ROP is a vocational training program that offers entry-level job training as well as advanced training for upgrading skills.

Rachel Mashoulam of La Mesa textures her fawn with a tile trowl.

After almost three hours, the class proudly displays their varied works of art, all formed from 16 300-pound blocks of ice.

Mount Miguel nominated for 1990 achievement award

Mount Miguel High School has been nominated for the 1990 Distinguished School Award in the performance category, announced Superintendent of Public Instruction, Bill Honig.

"The nomination is based on an assessment of our program and 16 quality indicators to measure reform movements," said Pat Carroll, principal of Mount Miguel. "The school must exceed the median score on the California Assessment Program (CAP) test and all of ours were in the 90-95 percentile range," he added.

Once a school is nominated, there is a 90 percent chance it will receive the award because there are no semi-finalists, said Carroll. The final decision will be made by a visiting team of state officials, college officials and previous award winners who will assess the program based on an on-campus inspection.

Mount Miguel's selection is in keeping with its prior noteworthy achievements in receiving numerous academic and scholarship awards.

Mount Miguel and Santana High Schools were the only high schools nominated in the Grossmont Union High School District.
